David Sansone is the Emission professor of the classics of the Illinois University in Urbana-Champaign. He adds a review and shares his thoughts with other readers. Features include maps, illustrations, lines, glossary, a guide for ancient Greek writers and a bibliography. He weaves the last scholarships and archaeological excavations in the narrative at an appropriate level for college students. He knows Socrates, Plato and Aristotle, Sophocles and Homer, but Hesiod, Euribides, Aeschylus, Aristófilos, Solon, Heróroato and Tucídides were just names that he had heard and without context for me. The Persian Wars, the War of the Peloponnese, the developments of democracy, the Retorica and the drama are there. He adds a review and shares his thoughts with other readers. Surveys The impressive history, literature, art and philosophy of ancient Greeks show how old Greeks used these forms of cultural expression to reinvent and how the Greek civilization has continually reinvented until the current day. Classical civilization has been a great gap in my learning. It also examines the in which these aspects of Greek civilization were affected by the interaction of Greek and reaction against other cultures in the Sansone's book is so brief that any 1,000 history of history could be and puts it in context and in an appropriate time line.
